

I personally resent the comments made by FCC Chairman Michael Powell regarding the Super Bowl Halftime show and I hope you will tell him.

The FCC has no right to play moral watchdog and censor for the American public. Furthermore, I am embarrassed that in the 21st century the the US government continues to try to demonize the human body in a truly Medieval manor with statements like, "I am outraged at what I saw during the halftime show of the Super Bowl. Like millions of Americans, my family and I gathered around the television for a celebration. Instead, that celebration was tainted by a classless, crass and deplorable stunt. Our nation's children, parents and citizens deserve better." or the implication that the exposure of a woman's breast is somehow obscene or indecent. My family and friends including some children saw the show, I don't believe anyone was offended or corrupted. In fact, most thought it kind of funny, and we moved on. What offends and outrages us far more is intolerance and the many evils that it always leads to. Maybe Mr. Powell should learn to not be so uptight and to learn some tolerance, then he would not be so easliy offended and outraged by such simply little things.
